JIM YOUNGER.

Probability that the Miserable Rufan Will Die in the Penitentiary from His Wounds.

St. Paul Press, April 23.
Jim Younger, of the Younger brothers, confined in the penitentiary and whose deeds at Northfield are still fresh in the memory of every Minnesotan, is in a fair way of shuffling off his mortal coil in a short time in the penitentiary. In his capture, it will be remembered, he was shot in the mouth, and the upper left jaw is gone. It is nearly all the work of the surgeon to keep his mouth open, and he has nearly all healed but occasionally small pieces of bone work themselves out, keeping his mouth very sore and inflamed, these sore almost constantly discharging matter substance. From the loss of his palate and upper left jaw it is very difficult for him to eat, and his food, which is taken with but little relish. He is unable to eat other than articles of food which can be taken easily, having but three upper teeth, and these are on the right side of the mouth. A dentist visited him a day or two since to see if a plate could be fitted to aid him in eating, but it was decided that it would only irritate his mouth, without being of any benefit. The fact that a bullet is still embedded in his mouth, and that it is nearly all the time sore, with no hope of getting better, and slowly but surely getting worse, shows that it is only a question of time as to how soon his iron will and the amount of suffering he has endured already would have crushed one less determined or hopeful. He is continually in pain, and oftentimes very severe. Though he says but little it is plain to see that he is slowly growing weaker. Of course, it is only a matter of conjecture as to how soon he will get his freedom through death. He is in bad shape and has but little hope of recovery. The State may be relieved of caring for him in a short time, and possibly his endurance and determination may carry him through two or three years, at the longest.

Will the Coming Men Use Tobacco?

In her lecture on "The Coming Man," Mr. Livermore asks the above question, and stated that Mr. Parton, some years since, in an article published in the Atlantic Monthly, maintained that its use is injurious to the race. A Harvard professor replied to the article and arrived at the opposite conclusion. She gave the following as a specimen of the professor's reasoning:
"Men generally use tobacco, whilst women do not;
Men have better health than women;
Therefore, tobacco is healthful."
She said that if the Harvard professor's premises were correct, the syllogism should have a different conclusion, and read as follows:
"Men use tobacco and women do not.
Men have better health than women.
Therefore, women should use tobacco."
For, said she, if it shall be demonstrated that the use of the weed promotes health, not only the coming man will use tobacco, but the coming woman as well.

Hoosier Criticism.
Upon the advent of Christmas Eve, an unusual display of evergreen adornment distinguished the Episcopal church of Warsaw, Indiana. Emblematic designs and significant imagery forming a marked contrast to churches of opposing denominations.
A genuine "Hoosier," upon that occasion, sauntering up the aisle, inquiringly gazing upon wreaths, festoons, and to him cabalistic devices, with heavy good-will, remarked to one of the High-Churchmen who hovered about the sacred altar, "Well, now, you've got your good-sheep fixed up first-rate; its nice." And with leisurely air, taking in "Stars of Bethlehem," and white-robed priest at that moment entering, serenely sauntered out.
A man remarked the other day that his axe was the "sweetest chopper" he had ever used, at the same time wishing to trade it. And upon another occasion a lady expressed herself as "powerful pleased." Fastidious daintiness shrinks to the enfeebled mutterings of imbecility in this fresh atmosphere of original speech. At unexpected intervals in these comprehensive utterances, mines of pure gold dazzle the eyes of beholders, and thrill the stagnant blood of conformity to life again.
